FOR THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A special souvenir edition of The Wash ington Times, devoted exclusively to the public schools of the District of Columhin, will be published on or about the 15th of June next. It will be of mammoth proportions, profusely and appropriately illustrated, and will teem with facts and figures and features of historical and present moment to every one interested in the development of our public school

Its object will be to make the schools betier understood, to help in making their beneficent work more widely known, and particularly to show to the members of the next Congress and the country at large what they have done for the cause of true education at the National Capital, so that more generous treatment may be hereafteraccorded them.

Our public schools are a credit to the nation, and are perhaps the most glonous monuments of real progress in good. citizenship to which we can point in this, our Capital City. Their usefulness has teen incalculable, and their possibilities are only immited by the will of Congress.

No school system in the country can show better results than ours-results often attained under adverse circumstances. For this the greatest possible credit is due to a most energetic and well-informed board of school trustees, a due of theroughly efficient superintendents, a splendid body of supervising principals, and a corps of instructors of recognized and unco the incubus of high prices for gas, but a pation gone. pecent conference between the mayor and representatives of the gas companies has resulted in material concessions on the part of the latter. Not only the municipality, but private consumers, will fare better in

As to private consumers the agreement provided that the companies shall reduce the price of gas five cents per one thousand cubic feet per annum until the net price shall not exceed one doltar. The concession may not be an extremely liberal one in the placence of exact information as to the present rate paid by Chicago people it is impossible to say-but at least it holds out to them the certainty that at a stated time they will have to pay no more than one dollar for one thousand feet of gas.

No such cheering hope may the people of Washington lay to their hearts. They have been told by the representatives of the Gas Light Company-during the hearing before the Congressional committees last winter-that there may be a reduction of price at some time in the dim, distant future, but more than this they know not; ere than this was not vouchsafed them. If they want cheaper gas, they will have to fight for it.

HUGH MCCULLOCH. The necrological record of the year is enriched by the name of one who played an important part in the history of the Hogh McCulloch, one of the great financiers the United States has produced, has possed away, in the patriarchal age of eighty-six

For more than twenty yearshe was under the public eye in positions of high trust and honor every one of which came to him unsought. Under Chase he was comptroller of the currency; twice secretary of the Treasury; the first to begin the reduction of the public debt, he labored in every instance to the great advantage of his country and credit to himself. Mr. McCulloch had unusual executive and administrative ability, as was shown at the time when, as Secretary of the Treasury, early in the year 1865, he found the finances at so low an ebb that a half million solers were unpaid, and other enormous obligations of the government had to be met. In an incredibly short period he succeeded in negotiating the loans which enabled him to discharge those debts and placed the treasury on a solid footing again. Personally Mr. McCalloch was unassuming, amiable, easily approached, yet a keen judge of men. He was a favorite of almost every circle in which he moved, and his public and private life was without a stain. His was a character which the future historian can point out as worthy of emulation.

A SOUND MONEY CAMPAIGN.

The campaign of education begun by sound money advocates should be free from abstrase, mystifying discussion. Few people not familiar with business methods and necessities can understand obscure financial argument. Their ability to comprehend is limited to the sphere in which they move, and they know nothing of monetary questions beyond the use of money as a circulating medium. It is difficult to make such persons comprehend why silver is not as good as gold when a silver dollar has precisely the same purchasing power. The point not understood is that gold redemption gives a fiat value to the silver that would be destroyed under

Another phase of the question that should be made clear is the value and use of money. Every dollar of currency issued must have a place and indefinite time of redemption, and the coin with which it is to be redeemed must be of the metal having the highest commercial value. The reason for this is that money must also have value as a commodity to retain its place as a medium of exchange, because the law of commerce provides that the metal having the highest market value shall be the one used as a standard to fix

When these fundamental features of the monetary problem are understood sound money advocates will be more plentiful; but until they are, there will be aggressive opposition. The fact that all forms of currency or coin of inferior metato be good must possess the important qualification of redemption at sight should ber of the Rochdale Co-operative So- be thoroughly impressed on the public mind. What they shall be redeemed in may be designated as sound money.

THE END IS NEAR.

The situation in Alexandria county looks more encouraging. The election of John son will be contested by Mr. Douglars, and the sheriff-elect promises to see that violators of the law are promptly prosecuted. Judge Chichester also declares that should Johnson defeat the contestant for the office of commonwealth's attorney, and continue to neglect his duty, he will see that Johnson is impeached. In any event, the chances for reformation are more hopeful, and it may be safely predicted that the end of lawlessness across the river is plainly in sight.

The Times feels joyful over this prospect, because it assumed the initiative and began the fight against the outlaw track and its kindred evils. But for its fearless and earnest exposure of the gamblers and their methods there would have been no abate ment of the lawlessness, nor would Washington have had much relief from the thugs and thieves that make Jackson City and Roslyn their homes.

It is proper, now that the election is over, for The T nes to thank the public for its loyal support during this context. Extraordinary efforts have been made by the gambler element to misrepresent and injure The Times, and namerous offers of noney and other considerations have been made to its advertisers to withdraw their patronage. Greatly to their credit as business men and immeasurably to their be nor as individuals, but two of them withdrew their advertising and joined the gambler forces. To them The Times can only offer its committeration.

Our cartoon this morning depicts a dancing scene which took place at the outlaw track immediately after the result of the Alexandria county-election was known. The refrain of the music, to which little Dicky and the Outlaw are dancing runs something like this: "Hip-pit-ty Dink-it-ty, here we are. Dink-it-ty, Hip-pit-ty, we don't care Pethaps if there were a gas trust in Wash- Dance to our music and all be gay. For now we'll do up the Washington jay."
